Communication and Leadership is an interdisciplinary Bachelor of Science degree that educates and empowers students to be ethical and effective leaders in a variety of contexts, including non-profit and philanthropy, public service, entrepreneurship, or business.

CLD is a flexible major with 27 hours of free electives that allow students to explore their interests and goals. For example, students can enhance one of the areas by taking relevant course work and adding a minor or certificate of their choice.

Communication and Leadership prepares students to lead positive change in our complicated world.

A degree in CLD can lead to work in the fields of communication, corporate social responsibility, public affairs, training and development, project management, consulting, event planning, or fundraising, to name just a few.
